

Contents

1	Collective Representations and Their Analysis	1
1.1	Collective Representations	1
1.1.1	What Are Collective Representations?	2
1.1.2	Properties of Collective Representations	9
1.1.3	Collective Representations, Individual Representations and Derivations.	12
1.2	The Analysis of Collective Representations	14
1.2.1	The Eliciting of Individual Derivations	16
1.2.2	The Reconstruction of Individual Derivations and Collective Representations.	20
1.3	Analysis: Of Collective Representations: Research Examples.	22
2	Theoretical and Methodological Basic Assumptions of the Discursive Interview	37
2.1	Three Methodological Premises	37
2.1.1	Collective Representations as a Sociological Concept of Knowledge, but a Non-constructivist One	38
2.1.2	Collective Representations Must Be Communicated and Used to Justify Actions.	40
2.1.3	Contrasting Interpretation as a Way to Reconstruct Collective Representations.	41
2.2	The Discursive Interview as a Social Situation.	42
2.2.1	The Situativity of Data Collection and the Radical Methodological Criticism of (Qualitative) Interviews	44
2.2.2	Interviews as Social Interaction	47

2.2.3	The Active Use of Interview Interaction in the Discursive Interview.	50
2.3	Questions and Answers in Qualitative Interviews.	54
2.3.1	Types and Effects of Interview Questions	55
2.3.2	Answers and Text Types.	61
3	Data Collection with Discursive Interviews	67
3.1	Sampling and Recruitment	68
3.1.1	Sampling.	69
3.1.2	Recruitment	72
3.1.3	Sample Size	75
3.2	The Discursive Interview as a Guided Interview	76
3.2.1	Guided Interviews	76
3.2.2	General Criteria for Constructing an Interview Guide.	78
3.2.3	Question and Stimulus Types.	83
3.2.4	Special Questions and Stimuli to Elicit Individual Derivations	88
3.3	Conducting Discursive Interviews as Guided Interviews	94
3.3.1	Factors that May Influence the Interview Interaction.	95
3.3.2	The Use of Guides in Discursive Interviews	97
3.3.3	Other Aspects of the Interview Process	100
3.3.4	Aspects of Research Ethics	106
4	Analyzing Discursive Interviews	111
4.1	Transcription.	111
4.2	The Reconstruction of Collective Representations from Interview Transcripts	114
4.2.1	Contrasting Interpretation.	114
4.2.2	Contrasting as Interpretative Strategy of the Discursive Interview.	121
4.3	Excursus: Contextualizing in the Analysis of Discursive Interviews	128
4.3.1	On the Meaning and Determination of Context(s).	129
4.3.2	Implications for an Interpretative Interview Methodology	132
4.4	Type Construction.	134
4.4.1	Real Types and Ideal Types	134
4.4.2	Type Construction in Qualitative Social Research.	138
4.4.3	Type Construction in Collective Representations Analysis (on the Basis of Discursive Interviews).	140

5 Ensuring the Quality of Discursive Interviews	145
5.1 Credibility	147
5.2 Scope	151
5.3 Quality Control in Collective Representations Analysis with Discursive Interviews	153
References	157
Index	173