

Table of Contents

---

List of Contributors	ix
Acknowledgments	xiii
Preface	xv
Introduction: "A Possible Relationship between Belief and Knowledge" Mark Ward Sr.	1
Chapter One: The "God-Problem" in Communication Studies Quentin J. Schultze	19
Chapter Two: Let Them Take the Lead: A Holistic, Culture-Centered Approach to Divine-Human Communication Lakelyn E. Taylor	37
Chapter Three: The Politics of Knowledge Production: Situating the "God Problem" in the Context of Decolonization Elaine Schnabel	53
Chapter Four: Religion and Spirituality in Communication Research: Moving Toward a Sociocultural Identity Framework Arielle Leonard Hodges	69

Chapter Five: The Researcher as Translator: Locating the God Problem in Researcher Identity Christine J. Gardner	89
Chapter Six: "Silence is the Communication Behavior of God": Contemplation and Collaborative Autoethnography Kathleen D. Clark	103
Chapter Seven: The "Still Small Voice": A Phenomenological Approach to Divine Communication Joshua D. Hill	119
Chapter Eight: Toward a Theory of Divine Communication? Prospects and Problems Mark Ward Sr.	139
Chapter Nine: Who Owns the God Problem? A Reader Response Solution Edward Lee Lamoureux	159
Chapter Ten: Reconsidering the "God-Problem" in Communication Studies Quentin J. Schultze	175