

Contents

Acknowledgements — VII

List of abbreviations — XI

Foreword by Barbara J. Keys — XIII

Introduction — 1

The invention of FIFA history — 1

Was 1974 a historical turning point in FIFA history? — 4

Football and Latin America's Cold War: a state of the play — 19

Structure of the book — 24

Chapter 1

English stiffness: a political history of FIFA during the long sixties, 1959–1971 — 27

A political approach to FIFA history — 27

The rise of Stanley Rous as president of FIFA — 42

Latin America and the 1966 World Cup: a turning point? — 58

Chapter 2

The administrator: politics and ideology in the making of a social legacy (1916–1970) — 73

João Havelange, an extraordinary life? — 73

An indestructible body – becoming an Olympic athlete — 76

From law school to swimming pools — 83

The global Cold War and the Brazilian elite self-image — 91

Chapter 3

“A Blonde Pelé”: business organization, political propaganda, and the 1970 World Cup — 105

“A true representative of business leaders” — 105

Unruliness explained — 110

The business leaders, the ball, and the homeland — 116

Where is the World Cup won? — 132

The blast of gifts — 137

Chapter 4

At the heart of the Brazilian miracle: casing and political propaganda in Havelange's election as the president of FIFA (1971–1974) — 145

Tying the knots: connecting the global and the national — 145

The role of the soccer agents in Havelange's election to FIFA — 150

Development, Brazilian style — 163

The age of the stadiums – promoting the Brazilian miracle — 167

The Brazilian national team and the myth of racial democracy — 179

Chapter 5

The world that we had lost.* FIFA political crisis and the making of a new international football order, 1971–1974 — 185

Voting maps — 185

“We will not tolerate women's soccer developing outside the normal organization” — 193

China: the last act — 196

A telegram from Santiago — 205

Europe in the mirror — 213

Conclusion: a new international football order? — 219

Annex: honors received by Havelange between August 1970 and July 1974 — 223

Bibliography — 225

Index — 237