

Table of Contents

Introduction 11

 Silence versus sound memory 25

 State of research 36

 Methods, questions, and goals 44

Chapter One: Music as a manipulative tool in Nazi cultural and political domination 55

 1.1. Nazi propaganda of German cultural supremacy and racial hatred .. 55

 1.2. Racial pseudo-aesthetics as the ideological background of cultural policies 64

 1.3. Nazi administration and racial jurisdiction versus Polish culture 72

 1.4. Racial segregation and ghettoization 81

 1.5. Nazi propaganda towards different social and ethnic groups 84

 1.6. The appropriation of Chopin by the Nazi propaganda 87

Chapter Two: Musical life in the General Government and annexed territories 97

 2.1 Music in the General Government 99

 2.1.1. Germans for Germans 112

 2.1.2. Music by Poles for Poles 115

 2.1.3. Music by Jews for Jews: The Warsaw Ghetto 117

 2.1.4. Appropriation, destruction, genocide: Three facets of Nazi cultural policy in Krakow 124

 2.1.5. Control of the symbolic spaces 127

 2.1.6. Clandestine music as protest, resistance, and quest for freedom 135

2.2. Music in Reich-annexed territories: Aufbau in the Warthegau 142

2.3. Soundscape of occupied Poland in witnesses’ testimonies 158

 2.3.1. Trauma-related sounds of violence 160

 2.3.2. Traumatic sound as creativity inception factor 166

 2.3.3. Sounds of being shot at 168

 2.3.4. Music as a tool of counteracting traumatic sounds 169

 2.3.5. Singing as method to counteract traumatic warfare sounds . 171

 2.3.6. Imagined music: Musical memory as survival technique 172

 2.3.7. Sounds of the ruined city 174

Chapter Three: The functions of music within the Nazi system of genocide in occupied Poland 177

 3.1. Psychopathology of the ritual 179

 3.2. Music as torture and as deception 183

 3.3. Music and management in Treblinka 190

 3.4. Sadistic domination: forced music-making 194

 3.5. Music as entertainment for the guards 199

 3.6. The interrelationship of torture and music from a psychoanalytical perspective 203

 3.7. Mass Killings and the Sound of Music 205

 3.8. Music as self-defense, resistance, survival, and mourning 209

Acknowledgments 221

Epilogue 225

List of abbreviations 231

 Bibliography 232

Appendix 251

Appendix to Introduction	251
Appendix to Chapter one	261
Appendix to 1.6.	266
Appendix to Chapter two	271
Appendix to 2.1.1. Poles for Poles	280
Propaganda through music for Poles as presented by the German media	283
Appendix to 2.1.2. Germans for Germans	285
Appendix to 2.1.3. Music by Jews for Jews	290
Appendix to 2.1.6. Clandestine music as protest, resistance, and quest for freedom	306
Appendix to 2.1.5. Control of the symbolic spaces	313
Musicians killed during the German occupation of Poland – a few portraits	317
Marian Neuteich	321
Singer Helena Ostrowska	322
Looted Chopin memorabilia from the collection of Leopold Binental (1886–1944), the Polish-Jewish chopinologist murdered by the Germans	324
The Plunder of the Binental Collection	328
List of items related to Chopin lost or stolen during the German occupation of Poland	330
History of the Fryderyk Chopin Institute Collection	332
Index of Names	341