

Table of Contents

|                         |    |
|-------------------------|----|
| Preface . . . . .       | V  |
| Abbreviations . . . . . | XI |
| Introduction . . . . .  | 1  |

Part I: The Discourse on Human Nature in the Renaissance and the Reformation

|                                                                                                                                                               |    |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Chapter 1: Two Trials, Multiple Interpretations: Reuchlin, Luther,and the Discursive Context of the Early Sixteenth Century . . . . .                     | 17 |
| 1.1 Competing Christologies on the Eve of the Reformation . . . . .                                                                                           | 18 |
| 1.1.1 Martin Luther's Theology of the Cross in theHeidelberg Disputation . . . . .                                                                        | 18 |
| 1.1.2 Between Sola Gratia and Prisca Theologia :Reshaping Christian Identity in the Late Fifteenth Century . . . . .                        | 26 |
| 1.2 A "Positive Misunderstanding"? . . . . .                                                                                                                  | 37 |
| 1.3 "Jewish Books Must be Destroyed": The Aftermathof the Reuchlin Affair . . . . .                                                                       | 40 |
| 1.4 Overcoming Scholastic Theology:The Reformation of the University Curriculum in Wittenberg,the Support for Reuchlin, and Luther's Secret . . . . . | 47 |
| 1.5 Intersections and Juxtapositions between the Trials ofLuther and Reuchlin . . . . .                                                                   | 58 |
| 1.6 A Polarized Discursive Context . . . . .                                                                                                                  | 65 |
| Chapter 2: Platonic Anima and Pauline Spiritus :Erasmus' Concept of Human Nature . . . . .                                                  | 67 |
| 2.1 Irenism and Philosophia Christi in the Letter to Paul Volz . . . . .                                                                               | 69 |
| 2.2 Homo prodigiosum quoddam animal : Erasmus' TheologicalAnthropology in the Enchiridion . . . . .                                         | 77 |
| 2.3 Origen, Plato, and the Allegorical Reading of the Bible . . . . .                                                                                         | 92 |

|                                                                                                            |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 2.4 The Moral Level of Erasmus' Pietas and His Critiqueof the Ceremonies of the Monks . . . . . | 96  |
| 2.5 Erasmus' Enchiridion and Luther's Early Theological Anthropology . .                            | 102 |

Chapter 3: Spirit and Flesh: Luther's Critique of Erasmus'

|                                                                                                                |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Anthropology . . . . .                                                                                         | 105 |
| 3.1 The Dialectic between Flesh and Spirit in Luther's Dictata superPsalterium . . . . .           | 106 |
| 3.2 The "Aristotelian Erasmus": Luther's Two-Fold Critique of theSoteriology of Erasmus and Biel . . . . . | 118 |
| 3.3 Divine Justice and Pagan Wisdom: Demarcating the Boundariesof Revelation . . . . .                     | 130 |
| 3.4 Body, Soul, and Spirit: Ockhamism and anti-Erasmianismin Luther's Anthropology . . . . .               | 142 |
| 3.5 Erasmus and Luther: Reception, Assimilation, and Transformation . .                                        | 152 |

Chapter 4: CRUX Sola Est Nostra Theologia: Luther's Theology of

|                                                                                                                                      |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| the Cross in Context . . . . .                                                                                                       | 155 |
| 4.1 "Dionysius, Whoever He May Have Been": Luther and the Debateon the Dionysian Corpus in the Early Sixteenth Century . . . . . | 156 |
| 4.2 Solus Amor and Amore Solo : Ficino and the Mystical Ascentto the One through Love . . . . .                    | 166 |
| 4.3 Pax Philosophica and Divine Union in Pico's De Ente et Uno . . . . .                                               | 176 |
| 4.4 Theologia Negativa More Scolastico : Eck's Commentaryto Dionysius' Mystical Theology . . . . .                 | 184 |
| 4.5 Scala Christus Est : Luther's Theology of the Cross and the Ascentto God through Christ's Humanity . . . . .          | 198 |
| 4.6 Eck and Luther: Two Competing Theologies . . . . .                                                                               | 205 |

Part II: Theologus Gloriae vs. Theologus Crucis: From the Christian Kabbalah to Luther's Sola Scriptura

Chapter 5: Solam Scripturam Regnare:

|                                                                                                    |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| The Development of Luther's Scriptural Argument . . . . .                                          | 209 |
| 5.1 The Sola Scriptura Argument and Luther's Grammar of Exclusion . .                       | 212 |
| 5.2 The Bible in Translation: The Overcoming of the Vulgate in theEarly Modern Times . . . . . | 216 |

|                                                                                                                                 |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 5.3 Patristic, Medieval, and Sixteenth-Century Influences in the Dictata super Psalterium .....                          | 230 |
| 5.4 The Indulgence Controversyand the Development of Luther's Scriptural Argument .....                                     | 235 |
| 5.5 Sola Scriptura and the Manifold Interpretations of Scripture .....                                                   | 246 |
| Chapter 6: The Spirit and the Letter:                                                                                           |     |
| The Debate on Biblical Hermeneutics in Context .....                                                                            | 249 |
| 6.1 In Spirit and in Faith: Grammar, Theology, and Sapientia Crucisin Luther's Operationes in Psalmos .....   | 250 |
| 6.2 Origen and Jerome the Public Targets, Erasmus theUnnamed Enemy: Luther's Front Against Allegory .....                   | 262 |
| 6.3 Luther Pro Erasmus: The Dispute between Erasmus and JacquesLefèvre on Heb. 2:7 .....                                    | 282 |
| 6.4 Luther Against Erasmus: The Controversial Interpretation ofGal. 2:11–14 .....                                           | 289 |
| 6.5 The Goat in Leipzig and the Bull in Wittenberg: The Spiritand the Letter in the Luther–Emser Debate ..... | 293 |
| 6.6 “Idle Spirits” and “Theologians of Glory” .....                                                                             | 309 |
| Chapter 7: Vera Cabala Dominis Nomini :                                                                                  |     |
| Luther's Theologia Crucis and the Christian Kabbalah .....                                                               | 311 |
| 7.1 The Influence of the Christian Kabbalah in Luther's Dictata superPsalterium .....                               | 316 |
| 7.2 Vera Cabala Dominis Nomini : Competitive Discourses at the Edgeof the Reformation .....                          | 325 |
| 7.3 The Lord and Our Lord: Deus absconditus , the Tetragrammaton,and the Cross of Christ .....                       | 330 |
| 7.4 Theologus Gloriae vs. Theologus Crucis .....                                                                  | 337 |
| 7.5 Theologia Crucis : Luther's Rejection of the Christian Kabbalah .....                                                | 343 |
| Conclusions .....                                                                                                               | 345 |
| Bibliography .....                                                                                                              | 353 |
| Index of Names .....                                                                                                            | 383 |
| Index of Subjects .....                                                                                                         | 389 |