

Contents

|                                                                     |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Foreword: Talking about the war, by Thomas Hanifle . . . . . | vii |
| 1. Monastery cell number 10 . . . . .                               | 1   |
| 2. A fire and its consequences . . . . .                            | 7   |
| 3. Fascist harassment . . . . .                                     | 13  |
| 4. Youthful exuberance . . . . .                                    | 19  |
| 5. Germany sounded more promising . . . . .                         | 23  |
| 6. Warm greetings from Gauleiter Hofer . . . . .                    | 31  |
| 7. Training as a tank mechanic . . . . .                            | 43  |
| 8. Crimes against humanity . . . . .                                | 51  |
| 9. In the Jewish ghetto . . . . .                                   | 73  |
| 10. War knows no mercy . . . . .                                    | 81  |
| 11. End of a friendship . . . . .                                   | 89  |
| 12. Attack on Stalingrad . . . . .                                  | 105 |
| 13. Calm before the storm . . . . .                                 | 113 |
| 14. 'Run, Raffainer, the war is over' . . . . .                     | 119 |
| 15. 'The dead can't harm us' . . . . .                              | 125 |
| 16. Journey into captivity . . . . .                                | 131 |
| 17. The struggle for survival . . . . .                             | 135 |
| 18. A research hospital? . . . . .                                  | 141 |
| 19. Free at last . . . . .                                          | 147 |
| 20. My new life . . . . .                                           | 151 |
| Afterword: 'Show your wound', by Hannes Heer . . . . .       | 155 |
| Notes . . . . .                                                     | 181 |