Teachers
Reclaiming the Wasteland in the
of the Adolescent Years of Schooling Middle
John Smyth & Peter McInerney

Table of Contents

Introduction ix
Acknowledgments xiii
Glossary xv

Part One. An Orientation to the Study 1

Chapter 1. Setting the scene 3
- The research issue 3
- Our frames of reference 4
- Teachers in the middle 6
- The promise of middle schooling 8
- The project schools 9
- Research design and methodology 10
- Representing schools and teachers' and students' lives 12
- The organization of this book 12

Chapter 2. Taking account of the context 15
- Introduction 15
- The Australian educational landscape 16

Public education policy 17
School portraits 19
Plainsville School 19
Broadvale K–12 Community School 21
New Vista Community School 23
Seachange High School 26
Investigator High School 28
Gulfview Secondary School 31
Closing remarks 33

Part Two. Young Lives 35

Chapter 3. Making adolescence everybody's business 37
Introduction 37
A young person's perspective 39
Becoming somebody: adolescent identity 43
Growing up in a risk society 45
Confronting difference 46
Class rules okay? 49
They call them 'povs' 49
Poverty and educational disadvantage 52
Blame the victim 53
Who is a 'good' teacher? 55
Conclusions 58

Chapter 4. Steering school reform back to students 61
Introduction 61
Supportive relationships: nurturing an ethos of care and trust 63
Broadening horizons: opening doors for young people 69
Negotiating the curriculum: student-centered learning 73
Generative themes: Investigator High School 74
Student-initiated curriculum: Plainsville School 75
Having a say: student voice in action 83
Engaging with the community: capacity building 85
Tapping into 'funds of knowledge': insights from Plainsville School 85

Community connections program: Broadvale R–12 Community School 88
Critical literacies: reading the word and the world 89
Closing remarks 93

Part Three. Adult Lives 95

Chapter 5. Teachers reinventing themselves . . . for kids! 97
Introduction 97
Working against the policy discourse 98
Class matters 100
Middle school pedagogy: a class response 102
It is about relationships 104
Enabling conditions for learning 106
Learning as an engaging activity 107
Connectedness 111
Care and respect 114
Belongingness in 'active learning communities' 120
Technologies of inclusion and exclusion: insights from Broadvale Community School 125
Technologies of exclusion: 'we've become tougher on kids' 127
Foucault and the regulation of the subject 129
Exclusionary structures 130
School behavior management: the politics of crisis management 130
Student behavior management at Broadvale Community School: 'three strikes and you're out' 132
Concluding remarks 137

Chapter 6. Transformative pedagogy for students 139
Introduction 139
Transformative pedagogy: rethinking the fundamentals 142
Teaching for an identity: professional identity as argument 145
Teaching as a social practice 152
Teaching for an 'educative community' 159
Closing remarks 164

Part Four. School Lives 167

Chapter 7. Schools reinventing themselves for young adolescents 169
Introduction 169
The reform imperative 171
Whole-school change 174
Reinventing an existing high school 175
Leadership 176
Staffing matters 178
Collaboration 178
Acting politically and strategically 179
Policy and practice mismatch 180
Reinventing school from the ground up 181
A license to be innovative 182
Curriculum coherence 183
Learning communities and integrated curriculum 183
Tensions and dilemmas 184
What is the education system up to? 185
The impermanence of reform 188
Reinventing schooling as a seamless transition 188
A networked collaborative community 189
Administration and leadership 190
Curriculum coherence 191
Thinking curriculum 192
Concluding comments 195

Chapter 8. Toward the pedagogically engaged school 197
Introduction 197
School culture 201
Pedagogy, teaching and learning 201
School structure 203
So, what is going on here? 205

Appendices 207
References 209
Index 223