

Contents

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| I. | INTRODUCTION: THE PROBLEM OF NARRATING EVOLUTION AND THE EPISTEMIC VALUE OF LITERATURE | 1 |
| 1. | Towards a ‘Non-Consilient’ Approach to the Study of Evolution and Narrative: Methodological Considerations and Literature Overview | 14 |
| 2. | Aims and Outline of this Study | 23 |
| II. | NARRATIVIZING EVOLUTION: AGENCY-ORIENTED AND CULTURAL-NARRATOLOGICAL APPROACHES | 29 |
| 1. | The Human Use of Narrative as a Cognitive Tool: Introducing an Agency-Based Approach to Narrative | 30 |
| 2. | From ‘Mere Behaviour’ to ‘Intentional Action’: Constructing Agency through Narrativization, Emplotment and Worldmaking | 47 |
| 3. | The Agency that Never Was: On the Limits of Narrative in Representing Evolution and Other ‘Unnarratable’ Phenomena of the Living | 58 |
| 4. | Studying Evolutionary Narratives: The Example of Neo-Darwinism | 75 |
| 4.1 | Searching for the Agents of Evolutionary Change: The ‘Unit of Selection’ Debate and the Construction of the ‘Gene’s Point of View’ in Neo-Darwinist Narratives | 78 |
| 4.2 | Narrativizing Evolution through Adaptive Tales: On the Use of Narrative as a Heuristic in Neo-Darwinist Theory and the Problem of ‘Just-so Stories’ | 91 |
| 5. | On the Cultural Embeddedness of Science: Modelling the Relationship between Evolutionary, Cultural and Literary Narratives | 104 |
| 5.1 | ‘Positivists’ and ‘Culturalists’: Reconstructing the ‘Two Cultures’ within Evolutionary Theory and Beyond | 106 |
| 5.2 | Theorizing the Ideological Embeddedness of Evolutionary Narratives – a Cultural-Narratological Approach | 115 |
| 5.3 | Connecting Evolutionary Narratives and Literary Fiction: The ‘Darwinian-Hobbesian Inter-Discourse’ in Ian McEwan’s Novel Saturday (2005) | 120 |
| 6. | The ‘Evolution/Narrative Nexus’: Summary of the Main Argument | 132 |

| | | |
|------|---|-----|
| III. | LAYING BARE THE EPISTEMIC VALUE OF CONTEMPORARY NOVELS: INTRODUCING IAN MCEWAN'S ENDURING LOVE (1997) AND RICHARD POWERS' GENEROSITY: AN ENHANCEMENT (2009) AS PRIME EXAMPLES OF 'EPISTEMOLOGICAL FICTION' | 135 |
| 1. | Key Narratological Concepts for the Analysis of Epistemological Fiction | 142 |
| 1.1 | Focalization and Point of View | 143 |
| 1.2 | Metanarration and Metafiction | 147 |
| 1.3 | Narrative Time and 'Genome Time' | 152 |
| 2. | "Evolution has culled us all into [...] efficiency": Enduring Love 's 'Modern' Darwinist Joe Rose | 157 |
| 3 | Fictionalizing the 'Prisoner's Dilemma': Joe's Neo-Darwinist Narrative of the 'Rational Agent' | 163 |
| 4. | 'Just-so Stories' Everywhere: Metanarrational Reflections on the Unreliability of Storytelling | 172 |
| 5. | "[Y]our being right is not a simple matter": Objections to Joe's Neo-Darwinist 'Truth Discourse' | 178 |
| 6. | When Latour Meets Darwin: Reflections on the Relationship between Knowledge and Survival in Powers' Novel Generosity: An Enhancement | 183 |
| 7. | The 'Epistemic Value' and the 'Epistemological Potential' of McEwan's and Powers' Novels..... | 193 |
| IV. | NARRATING EVOLUTION FROM THE 'ANTS' POINT OF VIEW': EXPLORING THE POTENTIALS AND LIMITS OF SYMBOLIC REPRESENTATION IN E.O. WILSON'S ANTHILL: A NOVEL (2010) AND OTHER 'STORIES OF INSECTS' ... | 196 |
| 1. | Key Concepts: Narrative Embedding and Narrative Framing..... | 202 |
| 2. | "[T]he dice fell right time and again": Providing Propositional Knowledge about Evolution in the Mode of Telling | 210 |
| 3. | Opening up a Bottom-Up View on Life: The Generation of Implicit Knowledge about Evolution through Formal Strategies | 217 |
| 4. | The Conflicted Agencies of the Anthill: From the Pheromone to the Superorganism | 223 |
| 5. | "Analogy is a slippery tool": A Comparison of Anthill and A.S. Byatt's Novella "Morpho Eugenia" (1992)..... | 230 |
| 6. | From 'Epistemic Value' to 'Epistemological Critique' – Comparing the Politics of Representation in Wilson's and Byatt's Literary Narratives..... | 243 |

| | | |
|------|--|-----|
| V. | REFLECTIONS ON AGENCY AND THE LIMITS OF NARRATIVE THINKING IN MULTIMODAL NOVELS: REPRESENTING ECOSYSTEMS IN MICHAEL CRICHTON’S JURASSIC PARK (1990) AND MARK HADDON’S THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME (2003)..... | 247 |
| 1. | Key Concept: Multimodality | 253 |
| 2. | “Linearity is an artificial way of viewing the world”: Contesting the ‘Narrative of Centralized Control’ in Michael Crichton’s Novel Jurassic Park | 257 |
| 3. | “Life finds a way”: The Ambiguous Messages of Steven Spielberg’s Filmic Remediations (1993, 1997) of Crichton’s Novel and the Agency of ‘Life Itself’ | 272 |
| 4. | “[O]beying really simple rules”: Reflections on Complexity and the Limits of Narrative Thinking in The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time | 280 |
| 5. | “I find people confusing”: Deducing Evolutionary Functions of Narrative Thinking and Theory of Mind from the Representation of an Autistic Mind ... | 291 |
| 6. | Meta-Cognitive Potentials of Multimodality in Foregrounding the Limits and Values of Narrative Thinking..... | 299 |
| VI. | CONCLUSION: RECONSIDERING THE EPISTEMIC VALUE OF CONTEMPORARY FICTION ENGAGING WITH EVOLUTIONARY THEORY | 302 |
| VII. | REFERENCES..... | 310 |
| 1. | Primary Literature | 310 |
| 2. | Works Cited | 310 |