

natur, wissenschaft und die künste nature, science et les arts nature, science and the arts

Dorothea Baumann

Music and Space

A systematic and historical investigation into the impact of architectural acoustics on performance practice followed by a study of Handel's Messiah

Contents

List of figures.....	xi
List of music examples	xvi
List of tables.....	xvii
Abbreviations.....	xviii
Preface	xxi

PART 1: MUSIC PERFORMANCE AND ARCHITECTURAL SPACE: THEORETICAL AND HISTORICAL FUNDAMENTALS

1.1 Introduction	3
1.1.1 Room acoustics and related disciplines.....	3
1.1.2 Architectural space, room acoustics and music performance.....	6
1.1.3 Music for rooms and rooms for music: two points of view and three levels of approach.....	8
1.1.4 Methodology: the study's two parts	13
1.2 Acoustic knowledge applied to the construction and use of rooms.....	19
1.2.1 Acoustic knowledge in ancient Greece and Rome	19
1.2.2 Pragmatic room acoustics in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance.....	23
1.2.3 Rediscovery of the ancient theater	27
1.2.4 Debates on acoustics in the seventeenth century.....	31
1.2.5 The development of acoustics as a science from the seventeenth to the twentieth century	33
1.2.6 Acoustic knowledge available to architects since the seventeenth century.....	36
1.2.7 Old and new rooms.....	41
1.2.8 Festival halls.....	44
1.3 Room acoustics and music: changing relations	45
1.3.1 The function of the performance site and its significance for room acoustics	45
1.3.2 Public concerts and the change of performance practice.....	48
1.3.3 New definition of chamber music around 1800 in relation to hall size.....	51
1.3.4 Architectural space as part of the work's performance	52
1.3.5 Electro-acoustical reproduction of space.....	59

1.4 Music and space: conditions for perception	61
1.4.1 The musician's situation.....	61
1.4.2 The composer's situation: interior and exterior spatiality of music	64
1.4.3 The listener's situation: aim of perception and perceptual constancy	66
1.5 Sound and sensation: physical, physiological and psychological principles	69
1.5.1 Sound and sound propagation	69
1.5.2 The physiology of hearing and characteristics of auditory perception	70
1.5.2.1 The function of the middle ear muscles.....	75
1.5.2.2 Directional hearing	77
1.5.2.3 Masking	78
1.5.2.4 Temporal aspects: blurring, blending, summation	78
1.5.2.5 Summary of physiological sound perception	79
1.5.3 Neuronal sound processing.....	80
1.5.3.1 The auditory pathways.....	80
1.5.3.2 Active perception.....	84
1.5.3.3 Experience and memory	86
1.5.3.4 Music and the brain	88
1.5.4 Hearing and measuring: perspectives from the psychology of perception	89
1.6 Room acoustics: fundamental concepts in physics.....	91
1.6.1 Geometrical room acoustics	92
1.6.2 Wave theoretical room acoustics.....	98
1.6.3 Reverberation time and absorption.....	102
1.6.4 Quantification of quality in room acoustics	106
1.6.5 General acoustic impression and acoustics at a certain place.....	113
1.6.6 Principles for the analysis of a room's acoustic quality	118
Seven basic rules.....	118
1.7 Spatial impression in sound recording.....	121
1.7.1 Technical limits of recording.....	121
1.7.2 Space in sound recording and reproduction	125
1.7.2.1 Artificial head recording.....	125
1.7.2.2 Monoaural recording	126
1.7.2.3 Stereophonic recording	127
1.7.2.4 Quadraphonic and multichannel recordings	129
1.7.3 Conclusions	131

1.8 Architecture related quality factors in room acoustics	133
1.8.1 Room proportions; relation of room height to width.....	134
1.8.1.1 Halls with low ceilings	135
1.8.1.2 Festival halls	136
1.8.2 Acoustic similarity of rooms	137
1.8.3 Critical volume of space	141
1.8.4 Critical room width	142
1.8.5 Architectural quality factors and type of space	146
1.8.5.1 Music rooms and concert halls	146
1.8.5.2 Theatres	148
1.8.5.3 Churches	154
1.8.6 The number of attendants	161
1.9 Music related the quality factors in room acoustics.....	165
1.9.1 Assessment of quality factors	165
1.9.2 Types of space	166
1.9.2.1 Music rooms and concert halls	166
1.9.2.2 Theaters and opera houses	170
1.9.2.3 Churches	173
1.9.3 Music genres and program types	174
1.9.4 Use of space types by period	175
1.9.5 Relations between space type, program type and size of the ensemble (numbers per part)	176
1.9.6 Music and space: ideal and reality.....	185
1.9.7 Room acoustic quality norms and their practical importance	187

PART 2: HANDEL'S MESSIAH

2.1 The change of performance practice and room acoustics	193
2.1.1 Handel's Messiah : an uninterrupted performance tradition	193
2.1.2 Important performances.....	194
2.1.3 Aim of research	199
2.1.4 The transformation of performance practice	200
2.1.5 Handel's own performance practice of Messiah and other works...	203
2.2 Handel, the oratorio volgare, and Arcangelo Corelli.....	205
2.2.1 La Resurrezione , oratorio for Rome (1708)	205
2.2.2 The halls at Palazzo Bonelli	208
2.2.2.1 The Salone grande	208
2.2.2.2 The Stanzione delle Accademie	210
2.2.2.3 Decoration, seating, number of listeners	211

2.2.3	Other concerts under Corelli in Rome	212
2.2.3.1	Scarlatti's oratorio La Passione at the Palazzo della Cancelleria	212
2.2.3.2	Orchestras' size under Corelli	215
2.2.4	Handel's Resurrezione : size of the orchestra and hall	216
2.3	The performance practice of the early English oratorio	219
2.3.1	Two forerunners from 1718: Acis and Galathea and Esther	219
2.3.2	The singers of the Chapel Royal and the 1732 version of Esther ...	220
2.3.3	Further oratorio performances in London	225
2.3.4	Handel's 1733 oratorio performances in Oxford, the building of Holywell Music Room in 1748 and the beginning of a Handel tradition	226
2.3.5	Handel's oratorio performances in London until 1739	229
2.4	The oratorio Messiah	233
2.4.1	Introductory note	233
2.4.2	The 1741–42 Handel-Season in Dublin	234
2.4.3	The performance of Messiah	236
2.4.4	The first performance: ensemble size and hall size	237
2.5	Handel's performances of Messiah in London	243
2.5.1	Handel's concerts at the Foundling Hospital	243
2.5.1.1	Messiah at the Foundling Hospital	244
2.5.1.2	Messiah after Handel's blindness	245
2.5.1.3	Size of orchestra and room at the Foundling Hospital	245
2.5.2	Handel's performances of Messiah at the theater	248
2.5.3	Theaters used by Handel	249
2.5.3.1	The King's Theater on Haymarket	249
2.5.3.2	The Covent Garden Theater	252
2.5.4	Documents on the acoustics of the London theaters	256
2.6	The impact of room acoustics on Handel's compositions	263
2.6.1	Room acoustics and the process of composition	263
2.6.2	Handel's performances with large ensembles	265
2.6.3	Virtual and actual space in Handel's compositions	267
2.6.3.1	Virtual space	267
2.6.3.2	Exterior acoustic conditions	270
2.6.4	Space, genre and structure of music	273
2.6.4.1	From chamber duet to oratorio choir	273
2.6.4.2	From oratorio choir to anthem choir	276
2.6.4.3	Limits in music structure for larger space	278
2.6.4.4	Is Handel's Messiah a "chamber oratorio"?	279

2.6.5	Size of orchestra in relation to the size of architectural space.....	280
2.6.5.1	Size of architectural space	280
2.6.5.2	Orchestra size and volume of space.....	282
2.6.5.3	Conclusions	284
2.7	The enlargement of the musical ensemble after Handel's death	285
2.7.1	The 1784 Handel Commemoration in Westminster Abbey	285
2.7.1.1	The acoustic conditions in the main nave of Westminster	292
2.7.1.2	The reconstruction of the Commemoration in Washington Cathedral 1984.....	294
2.7.2	The large choir festivals in England until the Handel Centennial in 1859.....	296
2.7.3	The Handel Centennial in Crystal Palace at Sydenham.....	299
2.7.4	Documents on the acoustics in Crystal Palace	302
2.7.5	Size of the orchestra and the concert halls in nineteenth-century London.....	306
2.7.5.1	Size of the concert halls.....	306
2.7.5.2	Seeing and listening	310
2.7.5.3	Enlargement of the ensemble and the "Additional Accompaniments".....	312
2.7.6	Back to the "original" size of the ensemble	317
2.8	Sound recordings	319
2.8.1	Some general remarks on recording techniques and musical analysis	322
2.8.2	Some remarks on ensemble size and sound balance	323
2.8.3	Comparative analyses of sound recordings	324
2.8.3.1	Series I: "Symphony" (Grave, Allegro moderato)	324
2.8.3.2	Series II: "For behold, darkness shall cover the earth", bass recitative	328
2.8.3.3	Series III: "Thou shalt break them", aria for tenor (Andante)	329
2.8.3.4	Series IV: Hallelujah, chorus (Allegro).....	332
2.8.3.5	Series V: "Lift up your heads", chorus (a tempo ordinario)....	333
2.8.3.6	Series VI: chamber duet "Quel fior che all'alba ride" (Andante larghetto) and choir "His yoke is easy" (Allegro)	333
2.8.3.7	Series VII: "Glory to God", chorus (Allegro) and "Glory" from the Coronation Anthem HWV 246 "The King Shall Rejoice"	334

PART 3: APPENDIX

3.1 Bibliography	337
3.1.1 Georg Friedrich Handel's Messiah : main sources.....	337
3.1.2 Editions of Handel's works	339
3.1.3 Editions of works by other composers	339
3.1.4 General bibliography	340
3.2 Discography	368
3.3 Tables.....	369
Table A: Orchestra size, chronological list.....	369
Table B: Oratorios, orchestral and choir compositions, chronological list of cited examples	377
Table C: Rooms, alphabetical list.....	395
Index	403