

Rosalind Marsh

Literature, History and Identity
in Post-Soviet Russia,
1991–2006

PETER LANG

Contents

Introduction	9
Part One
The political and cultural context
Chapter 1
Literature and politics in post-Soviet Russia	31
Chapter 2
The post-Soviet literary scene	73
Chapter 3
The politics of history and national identity in the post-Soviet era	103
Part Two
Overview of post-Soviet historical fiction
Chapter 4
The theoretical context of late and post-Soviet historical fiction	149
Chapter 5
‘Post-Soviet’ literature and history from 1987 to 2006: Continuity or change?	171
Chapter 6
New historical subjects in post-Soviet fiction	195
Chapter 7
Postmodernist, alternative and fantastic histories	245

Chapter 8
New developments in post-Soviet historical fiction	283
Chapter 9
History and literature in contemporary Russia: Back to the future?	351
Part Three
Two case studies
Chapter 10
The representation of Stalin and Stalinism in post-Soviet literature	417
Chapter 11
The theme of 'Russia and the West' in historical fiction of the post-Soviet period	487
Conclusion	533
Select Bibliography and suggested further reading	563
Index	581