

Contents

1 Introduction: Latency as a Mode of Memory — 1

- 1.1 Remembering Non-Events — 7
- 1.2 New Ways of Reading — 10
- 1.3 Multidirectional Memory — 11

2 Memory – Latency – Eventfulness — 21

- 2.1 Rethinking the Concept of the Event — 21
  - 2.1.1 The Event at the Core of Narratology: Structuralist Approaches — 21
  - 2.1.2 Poststructuralist Concepts of Affective Eventfulness — 26
  - 2.1.3 The Event and the Everyday — 33
- 2.2 Tracing Memory Studies: From an Identitarian to a Transcultural Approach — 36
- 2.3 Memory and the Market — 51
- 2.4 Memory, Literature and the Productivity of Not Knowing — 59
- 2.5 Exploring the Stowaway: The Concept of Latency — 63

3 Being Notably Absent: Uneventfulness and Digression in J.M. Coetzee's The Childhood of Jesus (2013) — 74

- 3.1 Lack of Eventfulness — 78
- 3.2 Digression as a Marker of Latency — 83
- 3.3 Removing Memory from Nationalistic Discourses — 87
- 3.4 Relocalising Memory: Embodied Memories — 94
- 3.5 Conclusion: Reflecting on the Intersection of Migration and Memory — 98

4 Idiorrhythm in Teju Cole's Open City (2011) — 103

- 4.1 Ambiguous Absences: Memories and the Blind Spot — 107
- 4.2 The Affordances of Rhythm — 111
- 4.3 The Rhythm of Reading Open City — 114
- 4.4 Rhythm on the Micro Level: Julius Walking the City — 118
- 4.5 Conclusion: Reading for Entanglement — 127

5 Non-Evental Multiperspectivity: Column McCann's Let the Great World Spin (2009) — 130

- 5.1 Multiperspectivity: Creating a Network of Relations — 133
- 5.2 Changing Perspectives: Challenging Contemporary Politics of Grievability — 140

5.3	When the Present Was Still the Future of the Past: Latent Memories of 9/11 —	150
5.4	Conclusion: Grievability beyond the Victim/Perpetrator Binary —	158
6	“Places are Ghosts, too”: Yvonne Owuor’s Dust (2014) —	160
6.1	“There is no purge through mourning, no effective reconciliation, no closure”: Memory Politics in Kenya —	166
6.2	“This land, its awful age – here time hums an ancient, eerie tune”: Haunting —	168
6.3	The Memory of Space: Animism, Wuoth Ogik and the Northern Kenyan Landscape —	174
6.4	Conclusion: Linking Memory Studies and the Environmental Humanities —	183
7	Re-Membering Modernism: Anna Burns’ Milkman (2018) —	185
7.1	Approaching the Contemporary —	188
7.2	Modernist Allegiances —	190
7.3	Modernist Entanglements: Cosmopolitanism —	195
7.4	Critical Cosmopolitanism —	197
7.5	Re-membering Modernism: The Flâneuse —	199
7.6	“At this time, in this place”: Contouring the Contemporary —	204
7.7	Conclusion: The Cosmopolitanism of Form —	209
8	Remembering Britain’s Lost Children: The Myth of Filiation in Caryl Phillips’ The Lost Child (2015) —	213
8.1	Literature’s Memory: Rewriting and Writing Back —	217
8.2	Latent Anachronic Entanglements: Transtextualisation —	221
8.3	Entangling Race and Class through Latent Juxtapositional Memory —	223
8.4	Forgotten and Unseen: Remembering the Female Subaltern —	229
8.5	Conclusion: The Latent Future —	234
9	Conclusion —	239
	Works Cited —	259
	Index —	280