

Contents

Acknowledgements — VII

Introduction: football, fascism and popular culture — 1

Part I

The sociogenesis of the Portuguese sports field — 12

- Introduction — 12
- 1 Sport and the leisure class: a distinctive practice — 14
- 2 The Portuguese Olympic Committee and the aristocratic-military model — 20
- 3 Cycling and the popularisation of sport — 26
- 4 Boxing, global popular culture and urban leisure — 30
- 5 Football, between community representation and a new civil society — 36
- 6 Associations not enterprises: the moral economy of the Portuguese sports club — 40
- 7 The sportivisation of football: from regional to national competitions — 43
- 8 Football and industry in southern Portugal — 46
- 9 Towards semi-professionalism: the beginning and the end of the myth of “love of the shirt” — 54
- 10 The press: imagining a great sports narrative — 61
- 11 The Portuguese football team in the 1928 Olympics: between autonomy and political appropriation — 65
- Conclusion — 75

Part II

The “New State” and sports: ideologies and institutions — 77

- Introduction — 77
- 1 Decadence and regeneration: locating sport — 83
- 2 The high school regulation of 1932: doctors and respiratory gymnastics — 88
- 3 Physical education and sports in the first Congress of the National Union: the triumph of the military — 93
- 4 The institutionalisation of the New State — 98
- 5 School and sport: “the sacred workshop of the soul” — 101
- 6 National Institute of Physical Education: “the doctrinal centre” — 105
- 7 Portuguese Youth: “order in the minds and discipline in the bodies” — 108

- 8 The National Foundation for Joy at Work: “more athletes, less spectators” — 117
- 9 National broadcasting: “Elevating taste” — 127
- 10 The General Board for Physical Education, Sports and School Health: “disciplining sport” — 132
Conclusion — 159

Part III

The lost purity of sport: the professionalisation of football players during fascism — 162

- Introduction — 162
- 1 The Hungarian connection: fighting for modernity and professionalism — 168
- 2 Global professionalism: multiple geographies and chronologies — 179
- 3 The Portuguese situation: shamateurism and its critique — 188
- 4 Blocking player transfers: the authoritarian state against mass spectacle — 194
- 5 The slow development of sports professionalism: institutional contestations — 206
- 6 European competitions and the changing landscape of Portuguese football — 213
- 7 Legislative change: mapping the professionalism debate — 217
- 8 Professionalism at last: the defeat of the official programme — 224
Conclusion — 229

Final Remarks — 230

References — 235

- Archives — 235
- Periodicals — 235
- Published Legislation — 235
- Printed sources — 236
- Bibliography — 238

Index of Names — 251

Index of Places — 256

Index of Themes — 258