

Contents

List of figures — 1

1 Introduction: religious experience as a practical theological challenge — 3

- 1.1 Problem horizon and aim of the study — 3
- 1.2 Research question and structure of the study — 6
- 1.3 Personal interest and self-reflexivity — 7

Part I Sensitizing Concepts

Introduction — 13

2 “Religious experience”: a conceptual approach — 14

- 2.1 Experience – an etymological definition — 15
- 2.2 Lived experience and experience — 16
- 2.3 Religious experience – a brief historical overview — 17
 - 2.3.1 Religious experience in monasticism, Martin Luther, and Pietism — 19
 - 2.3.2 Religious phenomenological and sociological conceptions of religious experience – selected examples — 21
 - 2.3.2.1 Examples of sociological approaches to religious experience — 21
 - 2.3.2.2 Examples of religious phenomenological and theological concepts of religious experience — 24
- 2.4 Summary — 29

3 Human existence in late modernity — 31

- 3.1 The living and experiential space of urban people — 33
 - 3.1.1 The digital experience space — 36
 - 3.1.2 The individualized and pluralized space of experience — 40
- 3.2 The urban living spaces — 43
 - 3.2.1 Urbanity in facts and figures — 45
 - 3.2.2 Urbanity research — 47
 - 3.2.3 Social scientific and anthropological definitions of the city — 49
 - 3.2.4 Conditions and characteristics of being human in urbanity — 51
 - 3.2.4.1 Freedom and foreignness — 51
 - 3.2.4.2 Individuality and sociality — 54
 - 3.2.5 Theological perspectives on life in the city — 56

3.3 Summary — 59

Part II Methodological Interlude

Introduction — 63

4 Practical theology within the horizon of qualitative social research –
Methodology — 64

- 4.1 Research subject and co-researchers — 66
- 4.2 Research principles — 67
- 4.3 Sample structure: Case groups and locations — 68
- 4.4 Data collection concept — 72
 - 4.4.1 Preliminary phase — 74
 - 4.4.2 Phase 1: Welcome and introduction — 75
 - 4.4.3 Phase 2: Standardized questionnaire — 76
 - 4.4.4 Phase 3: Creative approach to the theme — 77
 - 4.4.5 Phase 4: Biographical-narrative explanation of the drawing — 78
 - 4.4.6 Phase 5: Group discussion — 79
 - 4.4.7 The farewell — 80
- 4.5 Grounded Theory: The inductive character of the survey and evaluation procedure — 81
- 4.6 Summary — 83

Part III A Grounded Theory on the Change of the Frame of Reference through Religious Experience

Introduction — 87

5 Individual case presentation: the content of religious experience — 88

- 5.1 Group 1, Los Angeles: Abby and Vanessa — 88
 - 5.1.1 Abby — 88
 - 5.1.2 Vanessa — 89
- 5.2 Group 2, Los Angeles: Carmen and Kristine — 91
 - 5.2.1 Carmen — 91
 - 5.2.2 Kristine — 93
- 5.3 Group 3, Los Angeles: John, Micah, Sophie, and Tim — 94
 - 5.3.1 John — 94
 - 5.3.2 Micah — 95

5.3.3	Sophie —	97
5.3.4	Tim —	98
5.4	Group 4, Hanover: Niklas, Janik, Sabine, and Mirjam —	99
5.4.1	Niklas —	100
5.4.2	Janik —	101
5.4.3	Sabine —	102
5.4.4	Mirjam —	104
5.5	Group 5, Zurich: Ronnie, Gina, Leandra, and Felix —	105
5.5.1	Ronnie —	105
5.5.2	Gina —	106
5.5.3	Leandra —	108
5.5.4	Felix —	109
5.6	Group 6, Zurich: Sara, Tobi, Colin, and Simone —	111
5.6.1	Sara —	111
5.6.2	Tobi —	112
5.6.3	Colin —	113
5.6.4	Simone —	115
5.7	Summary: Defining religious experience from the perspective of the co-researchers —	116

6 Excursus: Inner aspects and basic observations on the religious experiences of the cross-case and cross-group evaluation — 119

6.1	The meaning of religious experiences for the co-researchers —	119
6.2	“Imprinting” as a liquid phenomenon before, during, and after a religious experience —	120
6.3	Verbalization —	122
6.4	Subjectivity —	123
6.5	Summary —	125

7 Processual aspects: Religious experience and the change of the personal frame of reference – cross-case and cross-group evaluation — 127

7.1	Religious experience: from experience to changing the frame of reference —	128
7.2	Before – Contingency, Search, and Relationship —	129
7.2.1	Experience in contingency and conflict —	130
7.2.2	Active search movement and relational impulses —	132
7.3	Moment of happening – the religious resonance space and the special everyday experience —	137
7.3.1	The place of religious experience —	138
7.3.2	Embodiment and emotions during the religious experience —	140

- 7.3.3 The Ability to Remember — 142
- 7.3.4 Relational (God) cognition – recognizing and being recognized — 143
- 7.4 Afterwards – from effect to experience — 148
- 7.4.1 Self-efficacy and dissolution of limitation — 150
- 7.4.2 Effects on everyday life — 151
- 7.4.2.1 Overcoming contingency through visualization — 152
- 7.4.2.2 Emotional changes inside and outside: “To become a better person” — 154
- 7.4.3 Belief – knowledge – certainty: verify and interpret — 157
- 7.4.3.1 Verify and interpret — 158
- 7.4.3.2 Meaning and orientation — 161
- 7.4.3.3 Rhythmization — 164
- 7.4.3.4 Certainty of faith and self-assurance — 166
- 7.5 Changing the frame of reference – Summary — 168

Part IV Discussion and Outlook

Introduction — 173

8 Interpretation of the results within the horizon of the initial questions — 174

- 8.1 Methodological preface — 175
- 8.2 Practical theological anthropological considerations — 176
- 8.3 Quality of knowledge of religious experiences — 184
- 8.4 The transformative effect of religious experiential processes — 190
- 8.4.1 Personal hermeneutics — 191
- 8.4.2 The transformative potential: religious experience as Widerfahrnis and life-historical interpretation of meaning — 193
- 8.4.3 Religious experience as an unavailable resonance relationship — 195
- 8.4.4 Religious experience as a catalyst for a personal transformation process within the horizon of Christian perspectives of hope — 197
- 8.4.5 Individualized religious identity — 201
- 8.5 Summary — 203

9 Experiencing the Christian perspectives of hope – a practical theological outlook — 207

- 9.1 References between religious experience and lived theology — 207
- 9.2 Lived theology – a definition of the term — 210
- 9.3 Lived theology as a complement to the conceptions of lived religion, lived faith, and ordinary theology — 212
- 9.4 Lived theology as practical theology “from below” — 216
- 9.5 Outlook — 219

10 Bibliography — 225

Register — 241