

Contents

Acknowledgements	9
Introduction – Integration Beyond Formal Equality	11
One – The (Im)Possibility of Integration	21
The Assimilation-like Integration	22
The Muhammad Cartoon Controversy and the Generalized Other .	28
The Problem of Moral Generalism	34
Segregation and Perpetual Foreignness	42
When is Integration Possible?	49
Two – Identity-based Thinking	55
Social Orders and Necessary Identity	56
Apparent Necessity, (Un)Justifiable Necessity, and the Identity of “Immigrant”	63
Identity-based Thinking and How It Excludes	73
Three – The Epistemology of Identity-based Thinking	81
The Model of Assumed Objectivity	82
Epistemic Irresponsibility	89
Epistemic Injustice	98
Four – Knowing People	111
Why Take Subjectivity into Consideration?	112
Narrative Knowledge and the Concrete Other	123
Ethics of Difference and the Moral Significance of Self-Cultivation	134

Five – Making Sense of “Strangers”	145
Who are “Strangers” in Our Midst?	146
Structural Injustice and Two Structures That Make “Strangers”	152
“Not-Self”: The Self-Centered Model of Strangeness	160
The “Stranger” and the Need for the Third Element	167
Six – History and Structural Transformation	177
Alienation: the Interactional, the Structural and the Existential ...	179
Why History?	186
History as a Social Connection Model of Responsibility	192
History as the Site of “Possibility”	201
Structural Transformation	211
Conclusion – Integration as Integration of People	215
Works Cited	227
Index	237