

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Conceptualizations of Higher Education Institutions as Organizations	2
1.2	Globalization and the Institutional Environment: A Case of Global Diffusion	5
1.3	Higher Education System in Germany Since the New Public Management (NPM) Reforms	8
1.4	Research Topic and Justification for the Study	11
1.5	The Research Questions of this Study	16
1.6	Structure of this Thesis	17
2	Mapping the State of the Art on Transnational Strategic Alliances Through a (Systematic) Literature Review	19
2.1	Definitions and Methodology for the Literature Review	20
2.2	Findings and Discussion of the Contributions from the Literature Review	24
2.2.1	Forms and Definitions of Transnational Strategic Alliances	24
2.2.2	Motivations for Transnational Strategic Alliances	25
2.2.3	Pathways to Pursue Transnational Strategic Alliances	27
2.2.4	Benefits Gained Through Transnational Strategic Alliances	29
2.2.5	The Use of Theory and Method	30

3	Strategic Change or Inertia? Theoretical Underpinnings, Framework and Expectations	33
3.1	Neo-institutional Theory: Origins and Definitions in Organizational Studies	34
3.1.1	Sociological Institutionalism and its Constructs	36
3.1.2	Sociological Institutionalism: a Lens to Explain the Pursuit of Transnational Strategic Alliances in Higher Education?	40
3.2	The Dynamic Capabilities Perspective: Origins, Definitions, and Factors that Affect Them	45
3.2.1	The Origin of the Dynamic Capabilities Perspective and how it extends the Resource-based View (RBV)	45
3.2.2	Definitions	47
3.2.3	Dynamic Capabilities Address Strategic Change Through Transnational Alliances at the Organizational Level	51
3.2.4	The Dynamic Capabilities Framework Applied to the Higher Education Context: Sensing, Seizing, Reconfiguring/Managing Threats	53
3.3	Expectations/Propositions and Overlaps from the Theoretical Underpinnings	68
4	Research Design and Methodology	75
4.1	Research Design	75
4.2	Methodology: Why use the Case Study Method?	78
4.3	Data Collection and Types	80
4.3.1	The TU9 Alliance and the selected Case Studies	84
4.4	The Semi-structured Interviews	85
4.5	Ethical Issues Considered	87
4.6	The Data Analysis: Process and Techniques	88
4.7	Coding and the Research Questions	90
4.8	Making Sense of the Coding: Emerging Patterns and Themes	93

5	The Empirical Journey Begins: Meanings of Transnational Strategic Alliances	95
5.1	Understanding the Institutional Environment, its Actors and their Role in Transnational Strategic Alliances: The Empirical Data from the External Stakeholders	96
5.2	Embeddedness of Higher Education Institutions in the Ecosystem: Understanding Transnational Strategic Alliances from the Empirical Data within the Institutions of Higher Education	103
5.2.1	Definitions of Transnational Strategic Alliances—Addressing the “What” Question	103
5.2.2	Reconciling Internal Pressures and Diverging Interests to Develop Transnational Strategic Alliances in Institutions of Higher Education: An Impossible Mission?	106
5.3	Chapter Summary	111
6	Positioning Through Transnational Strategic Alliances—Rationales for the “why”	113
6.1	Positioning into Diverse Organizational Fields	113
6.2	Typology of the Rationales of Transnational Strategic Alliances	121
6.3	Chapter Summary	123
7	Selection, Management and Evaluation of Transnational Strategic Alliances—the “how”	125
7.1	Sensing	126
7.2	Seizing	130
7.3	Reconfiguring/Managing Threats	138
7.4	Chapter Summary	143
8	Benefits of Transnational Strategic Alliances	145
8.1	Tangible Benefits	146
8.2	Intangible Benefits	153
8.3	Chapter Summary	156
9	Discussion	157
9.1	Forms and Definitions of Transnational Strategic Alliances	158
9.2	Rationales as Expected Benefits	159

9.3	Decision-making Architecture: Strategizing in Pluralistic Organizations	163
9.3.1	Inward Strategizing	163
9.3.2	Outward strategizing: Responses to Exogenous Institutional Pressures	168
9.3.3	Inward and Outward Strategizing: The Interconnection between the “Why”, “How” and Benefits in Joining Transnational Strategic Alliances	169
9.4	Taking a STANCE: A model for the Dynamic Alignment of Transnational Strategic Alliances for Strategic and Social Fitness, Reconsideration of the Propositions and Definition	173
9.5	Theoretical Contributions and Implications of the Findings	182
9.6	Practical Implications of the Findings: Policy and Practice Recommendations	183
9.6.1	Suggestions for Policy-making and Funding at the National Level for Transnational Collaboration	183
9.6.2	Recommendations for the Organizational Level on Transnational Strategic Alliances	186
9.7	Limitations of the Study and Areas for Further Research	187
10	Transnational Strategic Alliances as a Response to the Institutional Environment: Concluding Remarks	189
	Bibliography	193