

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	9
List of Figures	11
Introduction	17
Why the dead?	22
Memoria remembrance of the dead	24
Remembrance of the dead – from heroes to forensic evidence	25
Fama remembrance of the dead	30
Monuments	30
Anniversaries	35
Historia remembrance of the dead	39
Book structure	44
Methodology	47
Part I: Grassroot Orthodoxization	53
From Russian to Post-Soviet Russian Living with the Dead	55
A duty to the dead and changes in memory politics	62
Reconciliation with the living	64
Reconciliation with the dead	67
Moscow Patriarchate reconciles with the dead	72
Nevsky Pyatachok: Orthodoxizing Knot Memory	79
The left bank of the river and Soviet official remembrance of the dead	82

The right bank of the river and grassroot remembrance 85

Ivan Aleksander: a local memory guardian of dead soldiers 87

Post-Soviet patchwork memory 90

Contemporary economics on bones 94

Conclusions 98

St. Petersburg: Orthodoxizing Siege of Leningrad 101

 Victory Park’s Blockade Temple: from recreational facility to a site of memory 108

 Conclusions 114

Butovo: Orthodoxizing Family Memory 117

 Searching for the dead bodies 118

 The power of ties between the living and the dead 121

 1990s – Butovo as a site of family mourning rituals 124

 Memory conflict between Orthodoxy and secular 126

 2000s – transformation into the Sanctuary of the New Russian Martyrs . 128

 2017 – the Garden of Memory of 20,762 dead 134

 Conclusions 139

Part II: Top-Down Orthodoxization 141

Post-Soviet ROC of the Moscow Patriarchate Living with the Dead 143

Religious Memoria and ROC Hierarchy of the Dead 145

 Hierarchy of the dead of repressions 147

 Hierarchy of the dead in the war 151

Religious Fama: Orthodoxizing Secular Anniversaries	157
January 25 – post-Soviet Orthodox Memory Day of Soviet victims	158
October 30 – reading the names of victims of political repressions	160
June 22 – candles in memory of the war dead	164
May 9 – walking in the Immortal Regiment	167
 Religious Historia from religious to national narrative	 171
The Church of the Holy Martyrs Adrian and Natalia in Staro-Panovo – cosmopolitan memory of war	172
The Icon of St. Nina of Georgia – international memory of the Blockade	175
The Sanctuary in Butovo – the mournful memory of new martyrs	178
The Sanctuary in Katyn – Orthodoxy as a tool of reconciliation	182
The Sanctuary at Bolshaya Lubyanka – victorious memory of the new martyrs	190
The Main Cathedral of the Russian Armed Forces – national sanctuary of war	194
From Orthodox Rus’ to ‘Russia- My History’ – de-Orthodoxizing religious historia	199
 Conclusions	 205
 List of Recorded Interviews	 211
 Bibliography	 213
 Index	 239