

Acknowledgments	IX
1 Introduction	1
1.1 Topic, Motivation, and Central Claims	1
1.2 Preliminaries	3
2 The Significance of Our Perspective for What We Ought to Do	21
2.1 Introduction	21
2.2 Positions on the Normative Significance of Perspective	26
2.3 Against Subjectivism	32
2.4 Against Objectivism	36
2.5 Conclusion	48
3 Transparency, Guidance, and Non-Accidental Right Responses	49
3.1 Transparency Constraints for Normative Reasons	49
3.2 Practical Applicability as Condition on Normative Theories	52
3.3 Specifying Guidance: Non-Accidentality and No Misguidance ..	56
3.4 Analyzing Non-Accidental Right Responses	62
3.5 Sensitivity to Normative Reasons	69
3.6 Backup Reasons	74
3.7 Objections	84
3.8 Conclusion	88
4 A Guidance Problem for Perspectivism. Adjusting ‘Ought Implies Can’ and ‘Reason Implies Can’	91
4.1 A Guidance Problem for Perspectivists	91
4.2 ‘Ought Implies Can’	95
4.3 ‘Reason Implies Can’	105
4.4 Conclusion	117
5 Right Responses as Achievement	119
5.1 Right Responses and Creditworthiness	120
5.2 Creditworthiness qua Deliberative Achievement	130
5.3 What We Have Overall Reason to Do Is a Function of Our Available Reasons	136

5.4	The Connection Between Right Responses and Creditworthiness	144
5.5	Conclusion and Upshot	150
6	The ‘Shifty Ought’ Challenge: Perspectivism and Advice. Part One ...	153
6.1	The Challenge of ‘Shifty Oughts’: Deliberation and Advice	153
6.2	Kiesewetter’s Theory of Diachronic Reasons	156
6.3	Critical Assessment: Diachronic Reasons	159
6.4	A Possible Adjustment: Redefining the ‘Availability’ of Responses	166
6.5	Critical Assessment: Cases of Advice	167
6.6	Conclusion	171
7	The ‘Shifty Ought’ Challenge: Perspectivism and Advice. Part Two ...	173
7.1	Deliberation and Advice	175
7.2	Disambiguating Senses of ‘Ought’	178
7.3	Two Senses of ‘Ought’ and the Agent’s Stance Toward Herself ..	181
7.4	Sufficiently Close Reasons Provide a Rationale for Deliberation ..	189
7.5	Explaining Advice	197
7.6	Conclusion	205
	Conclusion	207
	Publication Bibliography	209