

Contents

1	Experience Retail Environments with (Almost) All Senses	1
2	Vision	5
2.1	Why Visual Stimuli?	5
2.2	The Devil Is in the Details: How Visual Stimuli Affect Consumers	6
2.2.1	Giving in to Temptations in the Dark	7
2.2.2	Effect of Color Brightness and Saturation	9
2.2.3	Color Association Used in Targeted Communication	13
2.3	The Whole Is Greater Than the Sum of Its Parts: How the Visual Context Influences Consumer Behavior	14
2.3.1	Product Arrangement	15
2.3.2	People in the Retail Environment	17
2.4	Outlook on the Use of Augmented Reality in the Retail Environment	19
3	Sound	21
3.1	Music Influences Consumer Behavior, But There Is Nothing Like the “Right Music”	21

3.2	Music Influences the Product Choice: You Buy What You Hear	23
3.3	Music Influences Product Perception: Feeling, Tasting, and Seeing What You Hear	25
3.4	Music Influences Shopping and Spending Behavior	27
3.5	Recommendations for Practice: Targeted vs. Intuitive Use of Music	29
3.6	Acoustic Stimuli at the Point of Sale: More Than Just Background Music	31
3.7	Outlook on Music and Sounds in Online Retail Environments	33
4	Scent	37
4.1	Why Ambient Scents?	37
4.2	Scents Act Differently	38
4.2.1	Scent Types	39
4.2.2	Scent Intensity	41
4.2.3	Familiarity with a Scent	41
4.2.4	Exposure Duration	42
4.2.5	How Should a Scent (Not) Be Designed?	43
4.3	The Effect of Warm and Cool Scents	45
4.4	Scents Evoke Specific Associations	46
4.5	Ambient Scents Also Have a Long-Term Effect	47
4.6	Cultural Preferences	48
4.7	The Use of Ambient Scents Raises Ethical Questions	51
5	The Interaction of Different Sensory Stimuli	53
5.1	Why Combine Different Sensory Stimuli?	53
5.2	How Multisensory Congruence Elicits Positive Evaluations	54
5.3	How Sensory Perceptions Influence One Another (Crossmodal Correspondence)	56
	References	59