

Content

Preface — XI

Introduction — 1

Chapter 1

Pre-Orientations — 5

- 1.1 The Need for Orientation — 5
- 1.2 The Primordialness, Self-Referentiality, and Temporality of Orientation: Dealing with Paradoxes — 8
- 1.3 Orientation under Uncertainty: Relying on Plausibilities — 9
- 1.4 The Analysis of Orientation: Connections and Methods — 12

Chapter 2

First Clues: Occurrences of Orientation — 15

- 2.1 Human Orientation — 15
- 2.2 The Orientations of Animals, Plants, and Particles — 16
- 2.3 Orientation as Interaction of Orientation Systems — 19
- 2.4 Human Orientation with Maps and Compasses — 22

Chapter 3

The Situation of Orientation: Time Pressure

Orientation as Finding-One's-Way — 25

- 3.1 Orientation about the Situation in the Situation — 25
- 3.2 The Basic Mood of Orientation: Being Unsettled by Time Pressure — 29
- 3.3 The Basic Attitude of Orientation: Attention and Courage — 32

Chapter 4

The Selectivity of Orientation: Views

Orientation as Overview — 35

- 4.1 Viewing the Situation — 35
- 4.2 The Direction of Attention while Viewing the Situation: Meaning — 36

VI — Content

- 4.3 Gaining an Overview: The Paradox of Seeing-Everything-and-Nothing — 38
- 4.4 Distinguishing Views Ethically: From Aspects (Hinsichten) via Intentions (Absichten) to Confidence (Zuversicht) — 40

Chapter 5

The Self-Arranging of Orientations by means of Horizons, Standpoints, and Perspectives

Orientation as Arranging Things within Leeways — 43

- 5.1 The Paradoxical Limit of Sight: The Horizon — 43
- 5.2 The Center of a Horizon: The Standpoint — 44
- 5.3 The View from a Standpoint: The Perspective — 47
- 5.4 The Flexibility and Mobility of Horizons, Standpoints, and Perspectives — 49
- 5.5 Spatializing Time and Temporalizing Space in Orientation — 50
- 5.6 Flexible Leeways of Orientation — 53

Chapter 6

Hold in Orientation: Points of Reference, Clues, Leads, and Footholds

Orientation as Hold — 55

- 6.1 The Hold of Points of Reference — 55
- 6.2 The Leeway of Points of Reference, Clues, Leads, and Footholds for Knowledge — 57
- 6.3 Paradoxical Decisions between Footholds — 59
- 6.4 The Affective Assessment of Footholds — 61
- 6.5 The Fitting of Footholds: Sustainable Schemata — 62
- 6.6 The Leeways of Orientation in the Brain — 66

Chapter 7

Signs as Footholds: Orientation as an Art of World Abbreviation

Orientation by means of Signs — 69

- 7.1 From Footholds via Markings to Signs — 70
- 7.2 Persistent Signs – The Leeways of Changing Meanings — 73
- 7.3 Orientation as an Art of World Abbreviation — 75

Chapter 8

The Self-Stabilization and Self-Differentiation of Orientation: Routines, Transposed Continuities, and Orientation Worlds

Orientation by means of Routines — 77

- 8.1 The Self as the Self-Referentiality of Orientation — 77
- 8.2 The Self-Stabilization of Orientation through Self-Structuring: Familiarity, Routines, Feelings, Plausibilities, and Memories — 82
- 8.3 Changing Routines, Transposed Continuities — 86
- 8.4 The Self-Differentiation of Orientation: Orientation Worlds — 87
- 8.5 Disorientations and the Evolution of Orientation — 90

Chapter 9

The Self-Reflection of Orientation: Leeways of Thinking

Orientation as Fluctuance — 93

- 9.1 The Self-Referentiality of Thinking and Its Paradoxes — 94
- 9.2 Thinking as a Skill of Orientation: The Distancing from the Situation in the Situation — 96
- 9.3 Being-Aware of Thinking as Becoming-Aware of Decisions about Distinctions — 100
- 9.4 The Calming of Irritations by means of Orders: The Hold in Terms via Logical Discipline — 103
- 9.5 Moving Terms: Fluctuances — 107

Chapter 10

Mutual Orientation: Interaction and Communication

Orientation under the Condition of Double Contingency — 111

- 10.1 The Unsettlement and Reassuring Calmness Caused by Others' Orientations — 111
- 10.2 Bodily Distances, Body Signs, Exchange of Glances, Interaction Rituals: Orientation Procedures in the Presence of Others — 115
- 10.3 Taking on Other Orientations: Imitations and Adaptations — 123
- 10.4 Speaking as a Means of Gaining and Losing Orientation; Languages as Orientation Routines — 125
- 10.5 The Double Contingency of Communication: The Concern for Connecting with Others; the Diplomacy of Signs; Building Trust; Maintaining Spheres of Distance — 130

Chapter 11

The Stabilization and Differentiation of Mutual Orientation: Respecting Identities

Orientation via Respect — 137

- 11.1 Identities: Steady Footholds of Mutual Orientation — 137
- 11.2 Exploring Identities: Communicating about the Other and Oneself with Third Persons — 147
- 11.3 Sexual Orientation, Sexual Identities — 148
- 11.4 Performances of Acceptable Identities — 151
- 11.5 Identification with Identifications: Identities in Dealing with Identities — 153

Chapter 12

Reckoning with Other Orientations: Economic, Mass Media, Political, and Legal Orientations

Orientation by Planning — 155

- 12.1 The Needs for Survival and Co-Existence: Societal Orders and Individual Freedom — 155
- 12.2 Economic Abbreviations: Goods, Markets, Money — 158
- 12.3 Orientation in the Public: Overviews Produced by Mass Media — 161
- 12.4 Political Circumspection and Foresight: Decisions for a Society — 167
- 12.5 Securing Intentions by Law: Guaranteed Coercions for Guaranteed Leeways — 175

Chapter 13

The Critical Disciplining of Orientation, Its Creative Disorientation, and the Hold on the Eternally Ungraspable: Science, Art, and Religion

Orientation at a Critical Distance — 183

- 13.1 Scientific Orientation: Critical Disciplining of Orientation — 184
- 13.2 Artistic Orientation: Creative Disorientation — 193
- 13.3 Religious Orientation: Holding on the Eternally Ungraspable — 198

Chapter 14

The Self-Binding of Orientation: Moral Orientation

Orientation through Self-Binding — 205

- 14.1 Closing the Leeways of Orientation: Moral Coercion — 208
- 14.2 Footholds for and Clues and Signs in Morally Relevant Situations — 209
- 14.3 The Self-Stabilization of Moral Orientation: Moral Routines, Moral Identities, Dominant Moralities, and Markets of Moralities — 213
- 14.4 Moral Coercions for Submitting to Societal Rules and for Acting Responsibly — 217
- 14.5 The Self-Differentiation of Moral Orientation: Moral Characters, Norms, Values, Orientation Worlds, and Their Leeways — 220
- 14.6 Perspectivizing Moral Coercions — 226
- 14.7 Moral Paradoxes: Irritations for the Evolution of Moral Orientation — 231

Chapter 15

The Self-Reflection of Moral Orientation: Ethical Orientation

Orientation through the Reflection of Self-Bindings — 235

- 15.1 The Moral Coercion to a Morality for Dealing with Different Morals: Forgoing Reciprocity — 235
- 15.2 Ethical Orientation: Reflecting One's Own Morality via Other Moralities — 238
- 15.3 The Virtues of Ethical Orientation — 240
- 15.4 Ethical Sovereignty: Setting Signs for Others — 245

Chapter 16

World Orientation in Globalized Communication

Orientation through Standardization — 247

- 16.1 Global Orientation — 247
- 16.2 Standardizations of Global Interaction and Communication — 251
- 16.3 The Digitization of Global Communication — 253
- 16.4 Standardized Leeways for Surprises: Global Displays of Desired Orientations in Sporting Events — 261
- 16.5 Fluctuant Value Orientation in Our World Orientation: Time Values — 263

Chapter 17

Metaphysics in Our Orientation

Disregard for the Conditions of Orientation within Orientation — 265

- 17.1 The Need for a Stable Hold on Solid Ground: Transcending
 Orientation through Metaphysics — 265
- 17.2 The Origin of Metaphysics in the Needs of Orientation and Their Change over Time — 269

Chapter 18

The End of Orientation

The Death of Our Orientation in Our Orientation — 275

Endnotes — 287

Index — 291